Miley Cyrus Talks "Hannah" Movie By Bekah Wright April 03, 2009 12:26 PM EST

Miley Cyrus arrived at Hollywood's El Capitan Theatre to the screams of adoring fans for the world premiere of her film, "Hannah Montana The Movie" last night.

"I can't believe it's finally here," she told reporters. "And I can't think of a better place, because this is the heart of Disney."

As for where Cyrus' own heart lies, well, the film answers that question. "Going back home," she told TV Guide Magazine. "That's the thing that made the film most relatable."

Also tugging at her heartstrings was boyfriend Justin Gaston, who was watching the proceedings along with the crowd. "He's letting me do my own thing," Cyrus said. "He's letting me shine tonight."

As to how the film will impact "Hannah Montana" the television series, Cyrus told TV Guide Magazine. "We don't know yet. We're still on Season Three, so I'm sure at some point it will, but right now we're just keeping with 'if it ain't broke, don't fix it.'"
